The reimbursements will continue until the allocated funds have been exhausted.

Course Description

Smoking is the most modifiable risk factor for poor birth outcomes. Successful treatment of tobacco dependence can achieve 20% reduction in low-birth weight babies, 17% decrease in preterm births and an average increase in birth weight of 28 grams. Between 13% and 17% of pregnant women smoke in the United States and only 18-25% of all women quit smoking once they become pregnant. This workshop will provide health care professionals with information regarding tobacco use during pregnancy and tools and techniques that can be implemented into a busy practice to promote tobacco cessation.

Speakers

Julia Francisco, MPH, Director, Tobacco Use Prevention Program, Office of Health Promotion, Kansas Dept. of Health & Environment Harlen Hays, MPH, Epidemiologist, Tobacco Use Prevention Program, Office of Health Promotion, Kansas Dept. of Health & Environment Monica Scheibmeir, RN, PhD, Associate Professor, University of Kansas School of Nursing, Kansas City, Kansas
